Synopsis	Bond unwittingly gets involved in a SPECTRE extortion plot to use the British Secret Service and the KGB against one another in order to steal a Russian encoding machine known as the Lektor. In a complicated series of twists and turns he is both aided and hindered by beautiful Russian agent Tatiana Romanova, and has to overcome villains Red Grant and Rosa Klebb.

Title song	'From Russia With Love' sung by Matt Monro
Notable points	First pre-title teaser. Desmond Llewelyn's first appearance as Q. Ian Fleming is seen as the man standing outside the train. The film's narrative is close to that of the novel, in which the main protagonist is SMERSH. In the film the addition of SPECTRE adds a greater level of complexity and the possibility of double-crossing both the British and Russian Secret Services, who suspect each other.
