Synopsis A prototype helicopter, impervious to electromagnetic interference, is stolen during a demonstration on the French Riviera. Whilst investigating the theft, an electromagnetic satellite weapon, known as Goldeneye, is activated, destroying a Russian tracking station. Bond is sent to discover who orchestrated the two events, and in doing so teams up with the sole survivor of the tracking station, Natalya. The trail leads to Alec Trevelyan, Bond's former MI6 colleague, presumed dead, who plans to use Goldeneye to cause worldwide economic disaster.
